DID JESUS HAVE TO DIE?

We have a song in our books that says Jesus could have called 10,000 angels to destroy the world and set Him free but He died alone for you and me. Technically that song is correct; He could have called 10,000 angels. In reality He could call up to 12 legions, 72,000 angels. If necessary they could have destroyed the world and they could have set Him free from the cross. But He did not do that, He died alone for you and me. But did He have to die? Could He have avoided the cross? If so, why did He not?

He did have to die. If not the Old Testament would be a farce. He was the subject of the Old Testament; His sacrifice was its main goal. As part of the inspiration process, He had stake in the reliability of His holy word spo-ken through the prophets of old. He had to die to avoid being a liar. He ful-filled over 300 prophecies in the Old Testament including dieing and resur-recting. He had to die.

Could He have avoided the cross? Yes He could have. He could have prayed in Matthew 26:39, "Father, I can't do it; let this cup pass from Me." It was within His control to stop the prayer like that. Instead He said, "If possi-ble let this cup pass from me, nevertheless not my will but Your will be done." And Matthew 26:53 stands, Jesus did have at His disposal more than 12 le-gions of angels. He could have avoided the cross.

He refused to avoid the cross because I needed His sacrifice. All that He promised me depended on His suffering of the cross and ultimate resur-rection. Hebrews 9:16 says that His sacrifice was necessary. Without that sacrifice all who died would be lost. The promise of the covenant was not available until the promising part died. His death on the cross sealed the promise of Jesus to the lost and dieing world. If He had used the 12 legions of angels, if He asked the Father to stop this, if He refused the will of the Fa-ther, all would be lost. He accepted the cross to pay for my sins so I could go to heaven.

Negativity

Why is it that some people project a positive attitude, while others are so negative? Some people are so unhappy that they no longer have that beautiful Christian spirit. They walk under a cloud of despair, and fail to see the good in others. I tend to believe that even though we are all sinners, there is a radiance of kindness in every person. I would hope that most individuals want to go to heaven. They are just blinded on how to get there. That is where we come in! Yet, in order to save these individuals we have to be positive. Those that are unhappy with the local congregation for petty reasons need to wake up. Quit being selfish, and start putting God first.
